MAKE YOUR BED BY WILLIAM H MCGRAVEN

This book provides valuable lessons from a tiny habit. For instance, when we wake up from our beds, this is the very first habit one is advised to take. The author shares his experiences and narrates his advice from the lesson he learnt while on his military training.

The first habit to make a big day is to make your bed, which means maintaining a clean bed with organized folding of blankets. Although this may seem a redundant process yet the author highlights that this is the first step one can appreciate that they have done something worth for a day.

For the following chapters, there are lots of topics such as “never quit, positive attitudes were discussed from a real life experience”.

MEN WITHOUT WOMEN- HARUKI MURAKAMI

BY LAKSHMI ACHARYA
(BA ENG STUDIES)

“Men without Women” is a book by Haruki Murakami with titles for each chapter. It holds seven eloquent stories of men in myriad phases of loving and losing women.

This book invites readers to delve into the lesser-known heart-tales of men. Murakami brings to the limelight the paradox of a man smiling calmly when his heart is torn and his insides are bleeding, as squeezed into words by Kafuku, a veteran actor who graces the first chapter with his realization of being unloved undeservedly.

Analogous anecdotes of realization subsequently follow until the final chapter dawn upon the mesmerized readers. It is a captivating journey of unraveling the fine tapestry woven by Murakami’s narration

A special recommendation to readers who relish short stories; it’s a perfect binding of fragments that speak of the reality of love in the most unexpected individuals and phases.
